

A remarkable photograph of a single combat plane flying just over a smoke screen laid by United States destroyers in recent battle manoeuvres held off San Diego harbor. Wide World Photos.

Destroyers of the Pacific fleet on the southern drill grounds laying a most effective screen against "enemy" craft. The speedy ships are here seen turning in their tracks after leaving a heavy curtain of smoke. Wide World Photos.

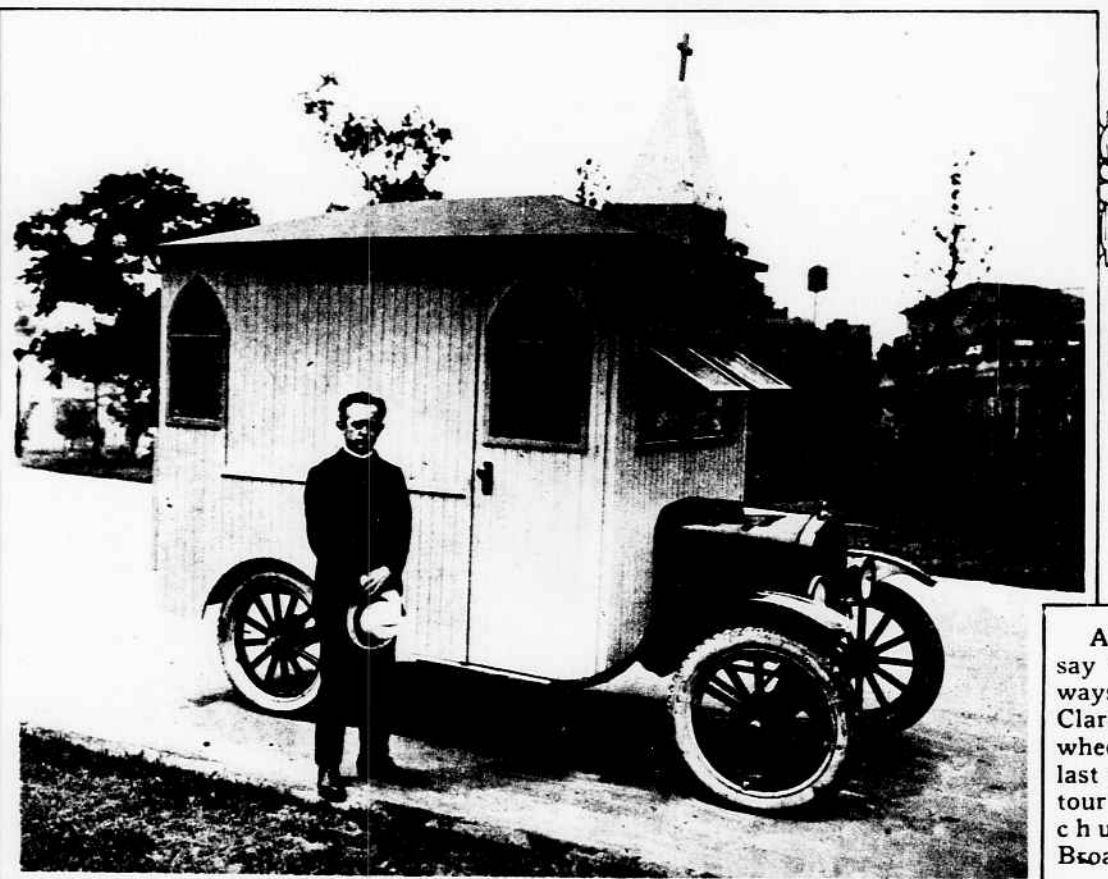

American bluejackets in the Holy Land watch water-carriers filling goat skins from well on site where Solomon's temple stood. U. S. Navy Official Photo.

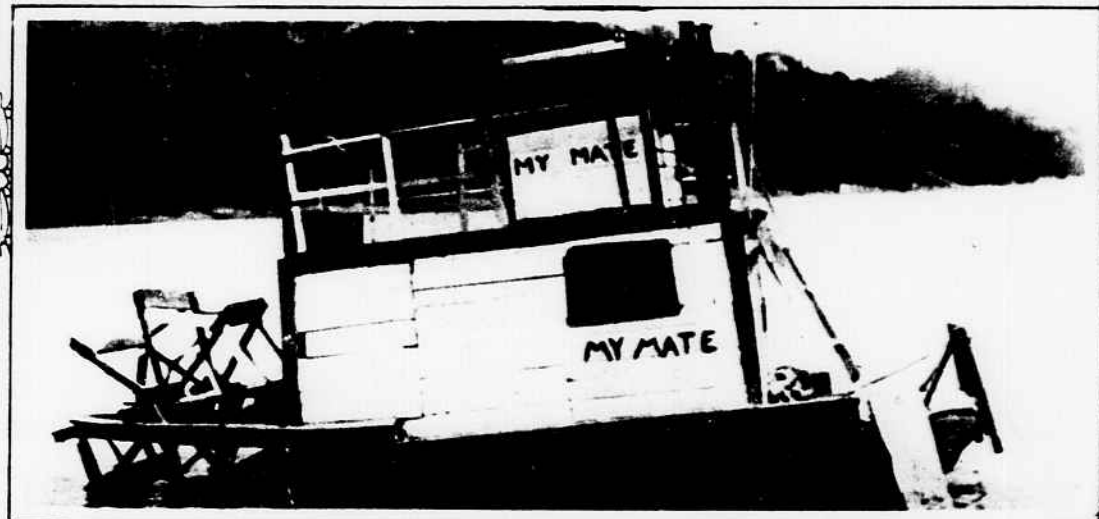

Striking sunset scene in San Diego harbor with United States destroyers anchored in the distance. Wide World Photos.

A real wild bucking bronco that lived up to its reputation at the annual rodeo held recently at Silinas, Calif., by making short work of his would-be rider. The photo shows the cowboy down, but the horse still in the air. International.

At left: The Scriptures say "Go out into the highways," so Rev. Branford Clarke has built a chapel on wheels, steeple and all, and last week he started on his tour by holding a series of church meetings along Broadway. Underwood & Underwood.

"My Mate" is what the skipper calls this only foot propelled "steamboat" on the Ohio river. This strange craft, including the two smoke-stacks for'ard, is a miniature replica of the "flats" of pioneer days. Underwood & Underwood.

Gen. Pershing inspected the Maryland National Guard troops at the Edgewood Arsenal near Baltimore last week and complimented their commander, Adjt. Gen. Milton Reckord on their fine appearance. International.

An ordinary basket of roses, eh? Well it looks like it except that each and every petal is carved out of plain ordinary table butter. The flowers would wilt fast in Washington. The ingenious sculptress, Mrs. Alice M. Cooksley, does all her sculpting in the refrigerator. Underwood & Underwood.
